Cruickshank charged that many Japanese-operated trucks seen on the highways were without sufficient loads to justify their use.

The M.P.'s latest suggestion is the second he has sent to Ottawa on the Japanese question.

At the outbreak of war in the Pacific, he asked the Dominion government to impose a curfew on Japanese in British Columbia to keep them in their homes every night from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m.

'Up To Ottawa,' Say Prairie Leaders On Mo

By JACK CROUCHER

The proposals that British Columbia's Japanese be taken from coastal areas and sent "East of the Rockies" evoked little interest in the prairie provinces today.

Few government or other leaders in the three provinces would make any official comment on the suggestion, declaring that "It's a federal matter, and has nothing to do with us yet."

Premier William Aberhart of Alberta, the first province "east of the Rockies," was away from the capital, and other members of the government refused to comment on the proposal. They pointed out that it would be a question of Federal war policy with which Alberta would not interfere.

Premier John Bracken of Manitoba also said he regarded it as a federal matter and would make no comment.

Two prairie leaders, however, who were willing to comment were A. S. Derosenroll, president of the Board of Trade at Moose Jaw, and Mayor MacEachern, of Saskatoon.

Said Derosenroll: "If the government, in its wisdom, wishes to remove the Japs further inland and provides sufficient and safe concentration camp facilities, the step would be taken here in the natural stride of the war effort."

Said Mayor MacEachern: "If British Columbia is afraid, the Japanese resid into concentra Axis nationals foolish to mov cities. We ha
